HENRY W. LONGFELLOW

INTRODUCTION.

LIFE OF LONGFELLOW.

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow belongs to that small band of truly cultivated men of letters, of whom America may justly be proud. From his early youth he was a scholar and his keenest pleasure was in hard study or in delightful musings over his books.

Longfellow was born in Portland, Maine, on the twenty-seventh of February, 1807. He early showed a remarkable power of acquiring languages and was ready to enter Bowdoin College at fourteen. Here he devoted himself chiefly to languages and literary studies. A foreign tongue, once mastered, was always at his command, even though he had not used it for years. "I cannot imagine," he once said, late in life, "what it would be to take up a language and try to master it at this period of my life. I cannot remember how or when I learned any of them — to-night I have been speaking German, without finding the least difficulty."

During these four years in college he wrote his first poems, many of which were printed in "The United States Literary Gazette." The first poem he ever wrote was called "The Battle of Lovell's Pond," and was published in a Portland newspaper. That same evening the young poet was invited to the house of the Chief Justice to meet his son, just returned from Harvard. In the course of the evening, the judge turned to his son and said, "Did you see a poem in to-day's paper upon the Battle of Lovell's Pond?" "No, sir," said the boy, "I did not." "Well," responded his father, "it was a very stiff production. Get your own poem on the subject and I will read it to the company." Meanwhile Longfellow sat very quietly in the corner.

In spite of this adverse criticism, the young author had determined upon a literary career, and when his college life was over, he persuaded his father to let him spend another year of study at Harvard, instead of beginning the study of law, as the latter wished.

Fortunately for him, a new professorship of languages had recently been established at Bowdoin College and the position was offered to Longfellow with the proposal that he should spend a year abroad in study before commencing his new duties. The offer was gladly accepted and Longfellow spent more than three years in France, Spain, Italy, Germany, Holland and England, before he finally settled at Bowdoin, at the age of twenty-two. Here he remained for two years, and married the daughter of Judge Potter of Portland.

At the end of that time he was appointed to the professorship of modern languages at Harvard and again went abroad to become more familiar with German. Here he suffered a terrible sorrow, for his beautiful young wife died at Rotterdam, and he was left to come home alone, and enter upon a solitary life at Cambridge.

He chose the fine old Craigie House as his residence and soon gathered about him a delightful company of friends. His life was full of work and everything from his pen was eagerly welcomed, but still he felt keenly the need of a home and so, after many years of loneliness, he married Frances Appleton, a very beautiful and cultivated woman.

Craigie House soon became noted as a delightful centre of hospitality, not only for the many friends at home, but for all the noted foreigners who visited this country. There were books everywhere and, although no catalogue was ever made of this library, the owner was never at a loss where to look for a needed volume. But it was the poet himself that attracted people and not the books, the home, nor the delightful guests who assembled there.

“His dignity and grace,” says Mr. Winter, “and the beautiful refinement of his countenance, together with his perfect taste in dress and the exquisite simplicity of his manners, made him the absolute ideal of what a poet should be. His voice, too, was soft, sweet, and musical, and, like his face, it had the innate charm of tranquillity. His eyes were blue-gray, very bright and brave, changeable under the influence of emotion . . . but mostly calm, grave, attentive and gentle. The habitual expression of his face was not that of sadness, and yet it was pensive. Perhaps it may best be described as that of serious and tender thoughtfulness. He had conquered his own sorrows thus far; but the sorrows of others threw their shadow over him. . . . There was a strange touch of sorrowful majesty and prophetic fortitude commingled with the composure and kindness of his features. . . . His spontaneous desire, the natural instinct of his great heart, was to be helpful — to lift up the lowly, to strengthen the weak, to bring out the best in every person, to dry every tear, and make every pathway smooth.”

Here in Cambridge the poet passed the rest of his life, although he visited Europe again, but after the death of his wife he aged rapidly and he resigned his professorship in 1854. His chief love was for music and little children, and he had many small friends.

One day a little boy, who often came to see him, after examining the great library carefully, asked, "Have you got 'Jack the Giant-Killer'?"

Longfellow was obliged to confess that he had not. The little boy looked very sorry and presently went away; but next morning he returned and gravely handed the poet two cents with which he was to buy a "Jack the Giant-Killer" for his own.

In March, 1882, the poet passed quietly away, leaving the legacy of a beautiful, scholarly life, which is even more to be treasured than his poetry.

Longfellow's principal works, with the dates of their publication, are as follows: Translation of the Spanish Poem by Don Jorge Manrique on the Death of his Father, 1833; Outre Mer, 1835; Hyperion, and Voices of the Night, 1841; Ballads and other Poems, 1842; Poems on Slavery, 1843; the Spanish Student, 1845; the Poets and Poetry of Europe, and The Belfry of Bruges, 1847; Evangeline, 1848; Kavanagh, a tale, 1849; The Seaside and the Fireside, and the Golden Legend, 1851; The Song of Hiawatha, 1855; Miles Standish, 1858; Tales of a Wayside Inn, 1863; Flower de Luce, 1866; Translation of Dante, 1867-70; New England Tragedies, 1869; The Divine Tragedy, 1871; Three Books of Song, 1872; The Hanging of the Crane, 1874; Kéramos, 1878.

MYLES STANDISH. \

The original portrait of Myles Standish was purchased by Roger Gilbert, shortly before the war of 1812, from a branch of the Chew family at Germantown, Philadelphia. In 1877, it was sold by Jas. Gilbert, a grand-nephew of the above Roger, to Capt. A. M. Harrison of the U. S. Coast Survey Service of Plymouth, Mass. There is a tradition in the Standish family that a portrait of Capt. Myles Standish existed and was taken to Pennsylvania by one of Alexander Standish's descendants and that this branch of the family died out after two or three generations. The portrait is painted on wood. Capt. Standish went to England for the Plymouth Colony in 1625 and probably had it painted there at that time, as it bears that date. It is supposed to have been painted by Cornelius Janssen, born of Flemish parents in England, who painted almost exclusively on wood.

The Courtship of Miles Standish

MILES STANDISH.

In the Old Colony days, in Plymouth the land of the Pilgrims,

To and fro in a room of his simple and primitive dwelling,

Clad in doublet and hose, and boots of Cordovan leather,

Strode, with a martial air, Miles Standish the Puritan Captain.

Buried in thought he seemed, with his hands behind him, and pausing 5

Ever and anon to behold his glittering weapons
of warfare,

Hanging in shining array along the walls of the chamber —

3. Cordovan. Leather manufactured in Cordova, a city of Spain famous for its production of leather and silverware.

4. Puritan. Protestants of England who were persecuted for their unwillingness to conform to the Catholic ceremonies of the Established Church. In consequence, a company of them embarked on the Mayflower in 1620 for the New World.

Cutlass and corselet of steel, and his trusty sword of Damascus,
 Curved at the point and inscribed with its mystical Arabic sentence,
 While underneath, in a corner, were a fowling-piece, musket, and matchlock. 10 Short of stature he was, but strongly built and athletic,
 Broad in the shoulders, deep-chested, with muscles and sinews of iron;
 Brown as a nut was his face, but his russet beard was already Flaked with patches of snow, as hedges sometimes in November.
 Near him was seated John Alden, his friend,
 and household companion,
 Writing with diligent speed at a table of pine by the window; 15

8. Cutlass. A strong curved sword with a basket-hilt, used especially at sea when boarding vessels.

8. Corselet. Armor for the body; generally the word refers especially to the breastplate.

8. Damascus. The ancient capital of Syria, whose swords were famous the world over.

10. Fowling-piece. A light gun for shooting birds.

10. Matchlock. A gun fired by means of a lighted match.

Fair-haired, azure-eyed, with delicate Saxon complexion,
 Having the dew of his youth, and the beauty thereof, as the captives Whom Saint Gregory saw, and exclaimed,
 "Not Angles but Angels." Youngest of all was he of the men who came in the May Flower. 20

Suddenly breaking the silence, the diligent scribe interrupting, Spake, in the pride of his heart, Miles Standish
 the Captain of Plymouth.
 "Look at these arms," he said, "the warlike weapons that hang here Burnished and bright and clean, as if for parade or inspection!
 This is the sword of Damascus I fought with in Flanders; this breastplate, 25

19. Saint Gregory. (540-604.) He was made Pope in 590. It is said that, in seeing some heathen Anglo-Saxon youths exposed for sale in the slave market at Rome, he exclaimed, "They would be indeed not Angli but angeli if they were Christians." It was he who sent Saint Augustine as a missionary to Britain.

21. Scribe. From the Latin scribere, one who writes.

25. Flanders. Miles Standish fought in the Netherlands in their revolt against Spanish rule.

Well I remember the day! once saved my life in a skirmish;

Here in front you can see the very dint of the bullet

Fired point-blank at my heart by a Spanish arcabucero.

Had it not been of sheer steel, the forgotten bones of Miles Standish

Would at this moment be mould, in their grave in the Flemish morasses." 30

Thereupon answered John Alden, but looked not up from his writing:

"Truly the breath of the Lord hath slackened
the speed of the bullet;

He in his mercy preserved you, to be our shield and our weapon!"

Still the Captain continued, unheeding the words of the stripling:

"See how bright they are burnished, as if an arsenal hanging; 35

That is because I have done it myself, and not left it to others.

Serve yourself, would you be well served, is an excellent adage;

28. Arcabucero. Spanish for "musketeer."

37. Adage. An old and wise saying.

So I take care of my arms, as you of your pens and your inkhorn.

Then, too, there are my soldiers, my great, invincible army,

Twelve men, all equipped, having each his rest and his matchlock, 40

Eighteen shillings a month, together with diet
and pillage,

And, like Cæsar, I know the name of each of my soldiers!"

This he said with a smile, that danced in his eyes, as the sunbeams

Dance on the waves of the sea, and vanish again in a moment.

Alden laughed as he wrote, and still the Captain continued: 45

"Look! you can see from this window my brazen howitzer planted

High on the roof of the church, a preacher who speaks to the purpose,

38. Inkhorn. A case of horn or wood for carrying ink and writing materials.

42. Cæsar. Julius Cæsar (100-44 B.C.) The famous Roman general who conquered Gaul.

46. Howitzer. A kind of cannon used for firing small shells.

Steady, straight-forward, and strong, with irresistible logic,

Orthodox, flashing conviction right into the hearts of the heathen.

Now we are ready, I think, for any assault of the Indians; 50

Let them come, if they like, and the sooner they try it the better —

Let them come if they like, be it sagamore, sachem, or pow-wow,

Aspinet, Samoset, Corbitant, Squanto, or Tokamahamon!"

Long at the window he stood, and wistfully gazed on the landscape,

Washed with a cold gray mist, the vapory breath of the east-wind, 55

Forest and meadow and hill, and the steel-blue rim of the ocean,

49. Orthodox. One whose opinions on any subject conform to an accepted standard; used especially of philosophical doctrines.

52. Sagamore, sachem. Indian chiefs of the second and first ranks.

52. Pow-wow. An Indian priest or conjuror.

53. Aspinet, etc. Indian chiefs of Massachusetts tribes, generally friendly to the Pilgrims.

Lying silent and sad, in the afternoon shadows and sunshine.

Over his countenance flitted a shadow like those on the landscape,

Gloom intermingled with light; and his voice
was subdued with emotion,

Tenderness, pity, regret, as after a pause he proceeded: 60

“Yonder there, on the hill by the sea, lies buried Rose Standish;

Beautiful rose of love, that bloomed for me by the wayside!

She was the first to die of all who came in the May Flower!

Green above her is growing the field of wheat
we have sown there,

Better to hide from the Indian scouts the graves of our people, 65

Lest they should count them and see how many already have perished!”

Sadly his face he averted, and strode up and down, and was thoughtful.

Fixed on the opposite wall was a shelf of books, and among them Prominent three, distinguished alike for bulk and for binding;

Bariff's Artillery Guide, and the Commentaries
of Cæsar, 70

Out of the Latin translated by Arthur Goldinge of London,

And, as if guarded by these, between them was standing the Bible.

Musing a moment before them, Miles Standish paused, as if doubtful

Which of the three he should choose for his consolation and comfort,

Whether the wars of the Hebrews, the famous campaigns of the Romans, 75

Or the Artillery practice, designed for belligerent Christians.

Finally down from the shelf he dragged the ponderous Roman,

Seated himself at the window, and opened the book, and in silence

Turned o'er the well-worn leaves, where thumb-marks thick on the margin,

Like the trample of feet, proclaimed the battle was hottest. 80

70. Commentaries. A history written by the great Roman general, Julius Cæsar, describing his own conquests in Gaul.

71. Arthur Goldinge. (1536-1605.) A minor writer whose chief work was translation.

Nothing was heard in the room but the hurrying
pen of the stripling,
Busily writing epistles important, to go by the
May Flower,
Ready to sail on the morrow, or next day at latest, God willing!
Homeward bound with the tidings of all that terrible winter,
Letters written by Alden, and full of the name of Priscilla, 85
Full of the name and the fame of the Puritan maiden Priscilla!

Myles Standish

LOVE AND FRIENDSHIP

Nothing was heard in the room but the hurrying
pen of the stripling,

Or an occasional sigh from the laboring heart
of the Captain,

Reading the marvellous words and achievements of Julius Cæsar.

After a while he exclaimed, as he smote with his hand, palm downwards,

Heavily on the page: "A wonderful man was

5

You are a writer, and I am a fighter, but here is a fellow

Who could both write and fight, and in both was equally skilful!"

Straightway answered and spake John Alden, the comely, the youthful:

"Yes, he was equally skilled, as you say, with his pen and his weapons.

Somewhere have I read, but where I forget,
he could dictate

Seven letters at once, at the same time writing his memoirs."

"Truly," continued the Captain, not heeding or hearing the other,

"Truly a wonderful man was Caius Julius Cæsar!

Better be first, he said, in a little Iberian village,

Than be second in Rome, and I think he was right when he said it. 15

Twice he was married before he was twenty,
and many times after;

Battles five hundred he fought, and a thousand cities he conquered;

He, too, fought in Flanders, as he himself has recorded;

Finally he was stabbed by his friend, the orator Brutus!

Now, do you know what he did on a certain occasion in Flanders, 20

14. Iberian. Iberia was a province between the Caucasus Mountains and Armenia. The name was also given to Spain and Portugal.

18. Flanders. Cæsar defeated the Belgæ in 57 B.C.

19. Brutus. Junius Marcus. He was at first an adherent of Cæsar but was induced by Cassius to become his assassin, March 15, 44 B.C.

When the rear-guard of his army retreated, the front giving way, too,

And the immortal Twelfth Legion was crowded
so closely together

There was no room for their swords? Why, he seized a shield from a soldier

Put himself straight at the head of his troops, and commanded the captains,

Calling on each by his name, to order forward the ensigns; 25

Then to widen the ranks, and give more room
for their weapons;

So he won the day, the battle of something-or-other.

That's what I always say; if you wish a thing to be well done,

You must do it yourself, you must not leave it to others!"

All was silent again; the Captain continued his reading. 30

Nothing was heard in the room but the hurrying
pen of the stripling

22. Twelfth Legion. The main divisions of the Roman army were called legions and numbered, as are our regiments. The Twelfth was especially famed in Cæsar's army for its bravery.

Writing epistles important to go next day by
the May Flower,

Filled with the name and the fame of the Puritan maiden Priscilla;

Every sentence began or closed with the name
of Priscilla,

Till the treacherous pen, to which he confided
the secret, 35

Strove to betray it by singing and shouting the name of Priscilla!

Finally closing his book, with a bang of the ponderous cover,

Sudden and loud as the sound of a soldier grounding his musket,

Thus to the young man spake Miles Standish
the Captain of Plymouth:

“When you have finished your work, I have something important to tell you. 40

Be not however in haste; I can wait; I shall not be impatient!”

Straightway Alden replied, as he folded the last of his letters,

Pushing his papers aside, and giving respectful attention:

“Speak; for whenever you speak, I am always ready to listen,

Always ready to hear whatever pertains to Miles Standish." 45

Thereupon answered the Captain, embarrassed,
and culling his phrases:

" 'Tis not good for a man to be alone, say the Scriptures.

This I have said before, and again and again I repeat it;

Every hour in the day, I think it, and feel it,
and say it.

Since Rose Standish died, my life has been weary and dreary; 50

Sick at heart have I been, beyond the healing of friendship.

Oft in my lonely hours have I thought of the maiden Priscilla.

She is alone in the world; her father and mother and brother

Died in the winter together; I saw her going and coming,

Now to the grave of the dead, and now to the bed of the dying, 55

Patient, courageous, and strong, and said to myself, that if ever

47. "'Tis not good," etc. And the Lord God said, It is not good that man should be alone; I will make him an helpmeet for him. — Gen. II., 18.

There were angels on earth, as there are angels in heaven,

Two have I seen and known; and the angel whose name is Priscilla

Holds in my desolate life the place which the other abandoned.

Long have I cherished the thought, but never have dared to reveal it, 60

Being a coward in this, though valiant enough for the most part.

Go to the damsel Priscilla, the loveliest maiden
of Plymouth,

Say that a blunt old Captain, a man not of words but of actions,

Offers his hand and his heart, the hand and heart of a soldier.

Not in these words, you know, but this in short is my meaning; 65

I am a maker of war, and not a maker of phrases.

Y u, who are bred as a scholar, can say it in elegant language,

Such as you read in your books of the pleadings and wooings of lovers,

Such as you think best adapted to win the heart of a maiden.”

When he had spoken, John Alden, the fair-haired, taciturn stripling, 70
 All aghast at his words, surprised, embarrassed,
 bewildered,
 Trying to mask his dismay by treating the subject with lightness,
 Trying to smile, and yet feeling his heart stand still in his bosom,
 Just as a timepiece stops in a house that is stricken by lightning, Thus made answer and spake, or rather stammered than answered: 75
 "Such a message as that, I am sure I should mangle and mar it;
 If you would have it well done — I am only repeating your maxim —
 You must do it yourself, you must not leave it
 to others!"
 But with the air of a man whom nothing can turn from his purpose, Gravely shaking his head, made answer the Captain of Plymouth: 80
 "Truly the maxim is good, and I do not mean to gainsay it;
 But we must use it discreetly, and not waste powder for nothing.

Now, as I said before, I was never a maker of phrases.

I can march up to a fortress and summon the place to surrender,

But march up to a woman with such a proposal,
I dare not. 85

I'm not afraid of bullets, nor shot from the mouth of a cannon,

But of a thundering 'No!' point-blank from the mouth of a woman,

That I confess I'm afraid of, nor am I ashamed to confess it!

So you must grant my request, for you are an elegant scholar,

Having the graces of speech, and skill in the turning of phrases." 90

Taking the hand of his friend, who still was reluctant and doubtful,

Holding it long in his own, and pressing it kindly, he added:

"Though I have spoken thus lightly, yet deep is the feeling that prompts me;

Surely you cannot refuse what I ask in the name of our friendship!"

Then made answer John Alden: "The name of friendship is sacred; 95

What you demand in that name, I have not the power to deny you!"

So the strong will prevailed, subduing and moulding the gentler,

Friendship prevailed over love, and Alden went on his errand.

THE LOVER'S ERRAND.

So the strong will prevailed, and Alden went
on his errand,
Out of the street of the village, and into the paths of the forest,
Into the tranquil woods, where bluebirds and robins were building Towns in the populous trees, with hanging gardens of verdure, Peaceful, aerial cities of joy and affection and freedom. 5
All around him was calm, but within him commotion and conflict,
Love contending with friendship, and self with each generous impulse.
To and fro in his breast his thoughts were heaving and dashing,
As in a foundering ship, with every roll of the vessel,
Washes the bitter sea, the merciless surge of the ocean!

“Must I relinquish it all,” he cried with a wild lamentation,

“Must I relinquish it all, the joy, the hope, the illusion?

Was it for this I have loved, and waited, and worshipped in silence?

Was it for this I have followed the flying feet and the shadow

Over the wintry sea, to the desolate shores of New England? 15

Truly the heart is deceitful, and out of its depths of corruption

Rise, like an exhalation, the misty phantoms of passion;

Angels of light they seem, but are only delusions of Satan.

All is clear to me now; I feel it, I see it distinctly!

This is the hand of the Lord; it is laid upon me in anger, 20

For I have followed too much the heart's desires and devices,

21. Heart's desires. Compare the General Confession in the orders of Morning and Evening Prayer in the Book of Common Prayer: “Almighty and Most Merciful Father, we have erred and strayed from Thy ways like lost sheep. We have followed too much the devices and desires of our own hearts, we have offended against Thy holy laws,” etc.

Worshipping Astaroth blindly, and impious idols of Baal.

This is the cross I must bear; the sin and the swift retribution."

So through the Plymouth woods John Alden
went on his errand;

Crossing the brook at the ford, where it brawled over pebble and shallow, 25

Gathering still, as he went, the May-flowers blooming around him,

Fragrant, filling the air with a strange and wonderful sweetness,

Children lost in the woods, and covered with leaves in their slumber.

"Puritan flowers," he said, "and the type of Puritan maidens,

Modest and simple and sweet, the very type of Priscilla! 30

So I will take them to her; to Priscilla the May flower of Plymouth,

22. Astaroth. Phoenician goddess of love. She was known among the Greeks as Astarte.

22. Baal. The supreme god of the Canaanites.

26. May flowers. The trailing arbutus which grows in great profusion about Plymouth

Modest and simple and sweet, as a parting gift will I take them;

Breathing their silent farewells, as they fade
and wither and perish,

Soon to be thrown away as is the heart of the giver."

went on his errand; 35

Came to an open space, and saw the disk of
the ocean,

Sailless, sombre and cold with the comfortless breath of the east-wind;

Saw the new-built house, and people at work in a meadow;

Heard, as he drew near the door, the musical voice of Priscilla

Singing the hundredth Psalm, the grand old Puritan anthem, 40

40. Hundredth Psalm.

"Make a joyful noise unto the Lord, all ye lands.

"Serve the Lord with gladness; come before his presence with singing.

"Know ye that the Lord he is God; it is he that hath made us, and not we ourselves; we are his people and the sheep of his pasture.

"Enter into his gates with thanksgiving and into his courts with praise; be thankful unto him, and bless his name.

"For the Lord is good; his mercy is everlasting; and his truth endureth to all generations."

Music that Luther sang to the sacred words of the Psalmist,

Full of the breath of the Lord, consoling and comforting many.

Then, as he opened the door, he beheld the form of the maiden

Seated beside her wheel, and the carded wool like a snow-drift

Piled at her knee, her white hands feeding the ravenous spindle, 45

While with her foot on the treadle she guided the wheel in its motion.

Open wide on her lap lay the well-worn psalm-book of Ainsworth,

Printed in Amsterdam, the words and the music
together,

Rough-hewn, angular notes, like stones in the wall of a church-yard,

44. Carded. Wool which has been brushed with a brush having nine teeth, to disentangle and separate the fibers.

45. Spindle. The pin which is used in spinning-wheels for twisting the thread, and on which the thread is wound.

47. Ainsworth. (1571-1622.) An English Separatist who was driven to Amsterdam, where he founded an independent church.

Darkened and overhung by the running-vine of the verses. 50
Such was the book from whose pages she sang the old Puritan anthem, She, the Puritan girl, in the solitude of the forest,
Making the humble house and the modest apparel of homespun Beautiful with her beauty, and rich with the wealth of her being!
Over him rushed, like a wind that is keen and cold and relentless, 55 Thoughts of what might have been, and the weight and woe of his errand;
All the dreams that had faded, and all the hopes that had vanished,
All his life henceforth a dreary and tenantless mansion,
Haunted by vain regrets, and pallid, sorrowful faces.
Still he said to himself, and almost fiercely he said it, 60 “Let not him that putteth his hand to the plough look backwards;
Though the ploughshare cut through the flowers
of life to its fountains,

Though it pass o'er the graves of the dead and the hearths of the living.

It is the will of the Lord; and his mercy endureth forever!"

So he entered the house: and the hum of the wheel and the singing

Suddenly ceased; for Priscilla, aroused by his step on the threshold,

Rose as he entered, and gave him her hand, in signal of welcome,

Saying, "I knew it was you, when I heard your step in the passage;

For I was thinking of you, as I sat there singing and spinning."

Awkward and dumb with delight, that a thought of him had been mingled

Thus in the sacred psalm, that came from the heart of the maiden,

Silent before her he stood, and gave her the flowers for an answer,

Finding no words for his thought. He remembered that day in the winter,

After the first great snow, when he broke a path from the village,

Reeling and plunging along through the drifts that encumbered the doorway, 75 Stamping the snow from his feet as he entered the house, and Priscilla Laughed at his snowy locks, and gave him a seat by the fireside, Grateful and pleased to know that he had thought of her in the snow-storm.
Had he but spoken then! perhaps not in vain
had he spoken;
Now it was all too late; the golden moment had vanished! 80
So he stood there abashed, and gave her the flowers for an answer.

Then they sat down and talked of the birds and the beautiful Spring-time, Talked of their friends at home, and the May Flower that sailed on the morrow.
“I have been thinking all day,” said gently the Puritan maiden, “Dreaming all night, and thinking all day, of the hedge-rows of England — 85
They are in blossom now, and the country is all like a garden;
Thinking of lanes and fields, and the song of the lark and the linnet,

Seeing the village street, and familiar faces of neighbors

Going about as of old, and stopping to gossip
together,

And, at the end of the street, the village church,
with the ivy 90

Climbing the old gray tower, and the quiet graves in the churchyard.

Kind are the people I live with, and dear to me
my religion;

Still my heart is so sad, that I wish myself back in Old England.

You will say it is wrong, but I cannot help it:
I almost

Wish myself back in Old England, I feel so lonely and wretched." 95

Thereupon answered the youth: "Indeed I do not condemn you;

Stouter hearts than a woman's have quailed in this terrible winter.

Yours is tender and trusting, and needs a stronger to lean on;

So I have come to you now, with an offer and proffer of marriage

Made by a good man and true, Miles Standish
the Captain of Plymouth!" 100

Thus he delivered his message, the dexterous writer of letters —
Did not embellish the theme, nor array it in beautiful phrases,
But came straight to the point, and blurted it out like a school boy;
Even the Captain himself could hardly have said it more bluntly.
Mute with amazement and sorrow, Priscilla
the Puritan maiden 105 Looked into Alden's face, her eyes dilated with wonder,
Feeling his words like a blow, that stunned her and rendered her speechless; Till at length she exclaimed, interrupting the ominous silence:
"If the great Captain of Plymouth is so very eager to wed me,
Why does he not come himself, and take the trouble to woo me? 110
If I am not worth the wooing, I surely am not worth the winning!"

Then John Alden began explaining and smoothing the matter,

Making it worse as he went, by saying the Captain was busy —

Had no time for such things — such things! the words grating harshly

Fell on the ear of Priscilla; and swift as a flash she made answer: 115

“Has he no time for such things, as you call it, before he is married,

Would he be likely to find it, or make it, after the wedding?

That is the way with you men; you don't understand us, you cannot.

When you have made up your minds, after thinking of this one and that one,

Choosing, selecting, rejecting, comparing one with another, 120

Then you make known your desire, with abrupt and sudden avowal,

And are offended and hurt, and indignant perhaps, that a woman

Does not respond at once to a love that she never suspected,

Does not attain at a bound the height to which you have been climbing.

This is not right nor just: for surely a woman's affection

125

Is not a thing to be asked for, and had for only the asking.

When one is truly in love, one not only says it,
but shows it.

Had he but waited awhile, had he only showed that he loved me,

Even this Captain of yours — who knows? — at last might have won me,

Old and rough as he is; but now it never can happen."

Still John Alden went on, unheeding the words of Priscilla,

Urging the suit of his friend, explaining, persuading, expanding;

Spoke of his courage and skill, and of his battles in Flanders,

How with the people of God he had chosen to suffer affliction,

How, in return for his zeal, they had made him
Captain of Plymouth;

135

He was a gentleman born, could trace his pedigree plainly

Back to Hugh Standish of Duxbury Hall, in Lancashire, England,

Who was the son of Ralph, and the grandson of Thurston de Standish;

Heir unto vast estates, of which he was basely defrauded,

Still bore the family arms, and had for his crest
a cock argent 140

Combed and wattled gules, and all the rest of the blazon.

He was a man of honor, of noble and generous nature;

Though he was rough, he was kindly; she knew how during the winter

He had attended the sick, with a hand as gentle as woman's;

Somewhat hasty and hot, he could not deny it,
and headstrong, 145

Stern as a soldier might be, but hearty, and placable always,

137. Lancashire. A maritime county in the northwest of England.

140. Argent. Of silver.

141. Combed. Having a comb.

141. Wattled gules. Having red lobes about his jaws.

141. Blazon. The coat-of-arms on a shield or banner.

Not to be laughed at and scorned, because he was little of stature;
For he was great of heart, magnanimous, courtly, courageous;
Any woman in Plymouth, nay, any woman in England,
Might be happy and proud to be called the wife of Miles Standish! 150

But as he warmed and glowed, in his simple and eloquent language, Quite forgetful of self, and full of the praise of his rival,
Archly the maiden smiled, and, with eyes overrunning with laughter,
Said, in a tremulous voice, "Why don't you speak for yourself, John?"

JOHN ALDEN.

Into the open air John Alden, perplexed and
bewildered,
Rushed like a man insane, and wandered alone
by the sea-side;
Paced up and down the sands, and bared his head to the east-wind, Cooling his heated brow, and the fire and fever
within him.
Slowly as out of the heavens, with apocalyptic splendors, 5
Sank the City of God, in the vision of John the Apostle,

5. Apocalyptic. The Revelation of Saint John in the New Testament is also called the Apocalypse.

6. City of God.

“And he carried me away in the spirit to a great and high mountain, and shewed me that great city, the holy Jerusalem, descending out of the heaven from God.

“Having the glory of God: and her light was like unto a stone most precious, even like a jasper stone, clear as crystal.” — Rev., XX., 10, 11.

So, with its cloudy walls of chrysolite, jasper,
 and sapphire,
 Sank the broad red sun, and over its turrets uplifted Glimmered the golden reed of the angel who measured the city.

“Welcome, O wind of the East!” he exclaimed in his wild exultation, 10 “Welcome, O wind of the East, from the caves of the misty Atlantic!
 Blowing o’er fields of dulse, and measureless meadows of sea-grass, Blowing o’er rocky wastes, and the grottos and gardens of ocean!
 Lay thy cold, moist hand on my burning forehead, and wrap me
 Close in thy garments of mist, to allay the fever within me!” 15

7. Walls. And the foundations of the walls of the city were garnished with all manner of precious stones. The first foundation was jasper; the second, sapphire; the third a chalcedony; the fourth, an emerald; the fifth, sardonyx; the sixth, sardius; the seventh, chrysolite; the eighth, beryl; the ninth, a topaz; the tenth, a chrysoprasus; the eleventh, a jacinth; the twelfth, an amethyst.”

9. Reed. The stock or rod of any plant. “And he that talked with me had a golden reed to measure the city, and the gates thereof, and the wall thereof.”

12. Dulse. A reddish kind of seaweed common in New England.

Like an awakened conscience, the sea was moaning and tossing, Beating remorseful and loud the mutable sands of the sea-shore.

Fierce in his soul was the struggle and tumult
 of passions contending;

Love triumphant and crowned, and friendship wounded and bleeding,

Passionate cries of desire, and importunate pleadings of duty! 20

“Is it my fault,” he said, “that the maiden has chosen between us?”

Is it my fault that he failed — my fault that I am the victor?”

Then within him there thundered a voice, like the voice of the Prophet:

“It hath displeased the Lord!” — and he thought of David’s transgression,

Bathsheba’s beautiful face, and his friend in the front of the battle! 25

Shame and confusion of guilt, and abasement and self-condemnation,

25. Bathsheba. The wife of Uriah the Hittite, and the mother of Solomon.

25. Friend. Because Bathsheba found favor in David’s eyes, he caused Uriah to be placed in the front of the battle at the siege of Rabbah, that he might be killed.

Overwhelmed him at once; and he cried in the deepest contrition:

“It hath displeased the Lord! It is the temptation of Satan!”

Then, uplifting his head, he looked at the sea, and beheld there Dimly the shadowy form of the May Flower riding at anchor, 30 Rocked on the rising tide, and ready to sail on the morrow;
Heard the voices of men through the mist, the rattle of cordage
Thrown on the deck, the shouts of the mate, and the sailors’ “Ay, ay, Sir!”
Clear and distinct, but not loud, in the dripping air of the twilight.
Still for a moment he stood, and listened, and stared at the vessel, 35
Then went hurriedly on, as one who, seeing a phantom,
Stops, then quickens his pace, and follows the beckoning shadow.
“Yes, it is plain to me now,” he murmured;
“the hand of the Lord is Leading me out of the land of darkness, the bondage of error,

Through the sea, that shall lift the walls of its waters around me, 40 Hiding me, cutting me off, from the cruel thoughts that pursue me.
Back will I go o'er the ocean, this dreary land will abandon,
Her whom I may not love, and him whom my heart has offended.
Better to be in my grave in the green old churchyard in England,
Close by my mother's side, and among the dust of my kindred; 45
Better be dead and forgotten, than living in shame and dishonor!
Sacred and safe and unseen, in the dark of the narrow chamber
With me my secret shall lie, like a buried jewel that glimmers
Bright on the hand that is dust, in the chambers of silence and darkness —
Yes, as the marriage ring of the great espousal hereafter!" 50

50. Espousal hereafter. "And I, John, saw the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband."

Thus as he spake, he turned, in the strength of his strong resolution, Leaving behind him the shore, and hurried along in the twilight,
Through the congenial gloom of the forest silent and sombre,
Till he beheld the lights in the seven houses of Plymouth,
Shining like seven stars in the dusk and mist of the evening. 55
Soon he entered his door, and found the redoubtable Captain Sitting alone, and absorbed in the martial pages
of Cæsar,
Fighting some great campaign in Hainault or Brabant or Flanders.
“Long have you been on your errand,” he said
with a cheery demeanor, Even as one who is waiting an answer, and fears not the issue. 60
“Not far off is the house, although the woods are between us;

58. Hainault. A province of Belgium, at this time belonging to Burgundy.

58. Brabant. One of the Low Countries. The capital is Brussels.

But you have lingered so long, that while you were going and coming
I have fought ten battles and sacked and demolished a city.
Come, sit down, and in order relate to me all that has happened."

Then John Alden spake, and related the wondrous adventure, 65
From beginning to end minutely, just as it happened;
How he had seen Priscilla, and how he had sped in his courtship,
Only smoothing a little, and softening down her refusal.
But when he came at length to the words
Priscilla had spoken, Words so tender and cruel: "Why don't you speak for yourself, John?" 70
Up leaped the Captain of Plymouth, and stamped on the floor, till his armor Clanged on the wall, where it hung, with a sound of sinister omen.
All his pent-up wrath burst forth in a sudden explosion,

Even as a hand-grenade, that scatters destruction around it.

Wildly he shouted, and loud: "John Alden!
you have betrayed me! 5

Me, Miles Standish, your friend! have supplanted, defrauded, betrayed me!

One of my ancestors ran his sword through the heart of Wat Tyler;

Who shall prevent me from running my own through the heart of a traitor?

Yours is the greater treason, for yours is a treason to friendship!

You, who lived under my roof, whom I cherished and loved as a brother; 80

You, who have fed at my board, and drunk at my cup, to whose keeping

I have intrusted my honor, my thoughts the most sacred and secret —

You too, Brutus! ah woe to the name of friendship hereafter!

74. Hand-grenade. A small bomb thrown from the hand.

77. Wat Tyler. The leader of a peasants' revolt in England in 1381. He was killed at Smithfield by Lord Mayor Walworth.

83. You too, Brutus. Julius Cæsar is said to have exclaimed, when he perceived Brutus among his assassins,
"Et tu, Brute!" See Shakespeare's Julius Cæsar.

Brutus was Cæsar's friend, and you were mine,
but henceforward
Let there be nothing between us save war and implacable hatred!" 85

So spake the Captain of Plymouth, and strode about in the chamber, Chafing and choking with rage; like cords were the veins on his temples.
But in the midst of his anger, a man appeared at the doorway,
Bringing in uttermost haste a message of urgent importance,
Rumors of danger and war and hostile incursions of Indians! 90 Straightway the Captain paused, and, without further question or parley, Took from the nail on the wall his sword with its scabbard of iron, Buckled the belt round his waist, and, frowning fiercely, departed.
Alden was left alone. He heard the clank of the scabbard Growing fainter and fainter, and dying away in the distance. 95
Then he arose from his seat, and looked forth into the darkness.

Felt the cool air blow on his cheek, that was hot with the insult, Lifted his eyes to the heavens, and, folding his hands as in childhood, Prayed in the silence of night to the Father who seeth in secret.

Meanwhile the choleric Captain strode wrathfully away to the council, 100 Found it already assembled, impatiently waiting his coming;
Men in the middle of life, austere and grave in deportment,
Only one of them old, the hill that was nearest to heaven,
Covered with snow, but erect, the excellent Elder of Plymouth.
God had sifted three kingdoms to find the wheat for this planting, 105
Then had sifted the wheat, as the living seed of a nation;
So say the chronicles old, and such is the faith
of the people!
Near them was standing an Indian, in attitude stern and defiant, Naked down to the waist, and grim and ferocious in aspect;

While on the table before them was lying unopened a Bible, 110

Ponderous, bound in leather, brass-studded,
printed in Holland,

And beside it outstretched the skin of a rattlesnake glittered,

Filled, like a quiver, with arrows; a signal and challenge of warfare,

Brought by an Indian, and speaking with arrowy tongues of defiance.

This Miles Standish beheld, as he entered, and heard them debating 115

What were an answer befitting the hostile message and menace.

Talking of this and of that, contriving, suggesting, objecting;

One voice only for peace, and that the voice of the Elder,

Judging it wise and well that some at least were converted,

Rather than any were slain, for this was but Christian behavior! 120

Then outspake Miles Standish, the stalwart
Captain of Plymouth,

Muttering deep in his throat, for his voice was husky with anger,

“What! do you mean to make war with milk and the water of roses?

Is it to shoot red squirrels you have your howitzer planted

There on the roof of the church, or is it to shoot red devils? 125

Truly the only tongue that is understood by a savage

Must be the tongue of fire that speaks from the mouth of the cannon!”

Thereupon answered and said the excellent
Elder of Plymouth,

Somewhat amazed and alarmed at this irreverent language:

“Not so thought Saint Paul, nor yet the other Apostles; 130

Not far from the cannon’s mouth were the tongues of fire they spake with!”

But unheeded fell this mild rebuke on the Captain,

Who had advanced to the table, and thus continued discoursing:

“Leave this matter to me, for to me by right
it pertaineth.

131. Tongues of fire. A reference to the descent of the Holy Ghost upon the apostles at Pentecost. See Acts, II., 3.

War is a terrible trade; but in the cause that is righteous, 135
Sweet is the smell of powder; and thus I answer
the challenge!"

Then from the rattlesnake's skin, with a sudden, contemptuous gesture, Jerking the Indian arrows, he filled it with powder and bullets
Full to the very jaws, and handed it back to the savage,
Saying, in thundering tones: "Here, take it!
this is your answer!" 140
Silently out of the room then glided the glistening
savage,
Bearing the serpent's skin, and seeming himself like a serpent, Winding his sinuous way in the dark to the depths of the forest.

V.

THE SAILING OF THE MAY FLOWER.

Just in the gray of the dawn, as the mists uprose from the meadows,
There was a stir and a sound in the slumbering
village of Plymouth;
Clanging and clinking of arms, and the order imperative, "Forward!"
Given in tone suppressed, a tramp of feet, and then silence.
Figures ten, in the mist, marched slowly out of the village. 5 Standish the stalwart it was, with eight of his valorous army,
Led by their Indian guide, by Hobomok, friend of the white men,
Northward marching to quell the sudden revolt of the savage.
Giants they seemed in the mist or the mighty men of King David;
Giants in heart they were, who believed in God and the Bible — 10

Ay, who believed in the smiting of Midianites and Philistines.

Over them gleamed far off the crimson banners of morning;

Under them loud on the sands, the serried billows, advancing,

Fired along the line, and in regular order retreated.

Many a mile had they marched, when at length the village of Plymouth, 15

Woke from its sleep, and arose, intent on its manifold labors.

Sweet was the air and soft; and slowly the smoke from the chimneys

Rose over roofs of thatch, and pointed steadily eastward;

Men came forth from the doors, and paused and talked of the weather,

Said that the wind had changed, and was blowing fair for the May Flower; 20

11. Midianites. An Arabian tribe settled in the northern part of the Syro-Arabian desert. They were finally conquered by Gideon.

11. Philistines. A Semitic people continually at war with the Israelites.

18. Thatch. Straw or hay.

Talked of their Captain's departure, and all the dangers that menaced,

He being gone, the town, and what should be done in his absence.

Merrily sang the birds, and the tender voices of women

Consecrated with hymns the common cares of the household.

Out of the sea rose the sun, and the billows rejoiced at his coming; 25

Beautiful were his feet on the purple tops of the mountains;

Beautiful on the sails of the May Flower riding at anchor,

Battered and blackened and worn by all the storms of the winter.

Loosely against her masts was hanging and flapping her canvas,

Rent by so many gales, and patched by the hands of the sailors. 30

Suddenly from her side, as the sun rose over the ocean,

26. Beautiful were his feet. See Isaiah, LII., 7.

"How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace; that bringeth good tidings of good, that publisheth salvation; that sayeth unto Zion, Thy God reigneth!"

Darted a puff of smoke, and floated seaward;
anon rang
Loud over field and forest the cannon's roar, and the echoes
Heard and repeated the sound, the signal-gun of departure!
Ah! but with louder echoes replied the hearts
of the people! 35
Meekly, in voices subdued, the chapter was read from the Bible, Meekly the prayer was begun, but ended in fervent entreaty!
Then from their houses in haste came forth
the Pilgrims of Plymouth, Men and women and children, all hurrying
down to the sea-shore,
Eager, with tearful eyes, to say farewell to the
May Flower, 40
Homeward bound o'er the sea, and leaving them there in the desert.

Foremost among them was Alden. All night he had lain without slumber, Turning and tossing about in the heat and unrest of his fever.
He had beheld Miles Standish, who came back late from the council,

Stalking into the room, and heard him mutter
and murmur,

Sometimes it seemed a prayer, and sometimes it sounded like swearing. 45

Once he had come to the bed, and stood there a moment in silence;

Then he had turned away, and said: "I will not awake him;

Let him sleep on, it is best; for what is the use of more talking!"

Then he extinguished the light, and threw himself down on his pallet, 50

Dressed as he was, and ready to start at the break of the morning —

Covered himself with the cloak he had worn in his campaigns in Flanders —

Slept as a soldier sleeps in his bivouac, ready for action.

But with the dawn he arose; in the twilight
Alden beheld him

Put on his corselet of steel, and all the rest of his armor, 55

Buckle about his waist his trusty blade of Damascus,

Take from the corner his musket, and so stride out of the chamber.

Often the heart of the youth had burned and yearned to embrace him, Often his lips had essayed to speak, imploring for pardon;
All the old friendship came back, with its tender and grateful emotions; 60
But his pride overmastered the nobler nature
within him —
Pride, and the sense of his wrong, and the burning fire of the insult.
So he beheld his friend departing in anger,
but spake not,
Saw him go forth to danger, perhaps to death,
and he spake not!
Then he arose from his bed, and heard what the people were saying, 65 Joined in the talk at the door, with Stephen and Richard and Gilbert, Joined in the morning prayer, and in the reading of Scripture,
And, with the others, in haste went hurrying
down to the sea-shore,
Down to the Plymouth Rock, that had been to their feet as a doorstep

69. Plymouth Rock. A rock in Plymouth Harbor, now protected by a monument, upon which the Pilgrims were supposed to have stepped in landing.

Into a world unknown — the corner-stone of a nation! 70

There with his boat was the Master, already a little impatient
Lest he should lose the tide, or the wind might shift to the eastward, Square-built, hearty and strong, with an odor
of ocean about him, Speaking with this one and that, and cramming letters and parcels Into his pockets capacious, and messages mingled together 75
Into his narrow brain, till at last he was wholly bewildered.

Nearer the boat stood Alden, with one foot placed on the gunwale,
One still firm on the rock, and talking at times
with the sailors,
Seated erect on the thwarts, all ready and eager for starting.

He too was eager to go, and thus put an end to his anguish, 80
Thinking to fly from despair, that swifter than keel is or canvas, Thinking to drown in the sea the ghost that would rise and pursue him.

But as he gazed on the crowd, he beheld the form of Priscilla
 Standing dejected among them, unconscious of all that was passing.
 Fixed were her eyes upon his, as if she divined
 his intention, 85
 Fixed with a look 'so sad, so reproachful, imploring, and patient,
 That with a sudden revulsion his heart recoiled
 from its purpose,
 As from the verge of a crag, where one step more is destruction.
 Strange is the heart of man, with its quick,
 mysterious instincts!
 Strange is the life of man, and fatal or fated are moments, 90
 Whereupon turn, as on hinges, the gates of the wall adamantine!
 "Here I remain!" he exclaimed, as he looked at the heavens above him,

91. Hinges. Milton is fond of using this figure. See Paradise Lost, VII., 205.

"Heaven open'd wide
 Her ever-during gates, harmonious sound
 On golden hinges moving."

91. Adamantine. Adamant is an exceedingly hard stone.

Thanking the Lord whose breath had scattered the mist and the madness,

Wherein, blind and lost, to death he was staggering headlong.

“Yonder snow-white cloud, that floats in the ether above me, 95

Seems like a hand that is pointing and beckoning over the ocean.

There is another hand, that is not so spectral and ghost-like,

Holding me, drawing me back, and clasping mine for protection.

Float, O hand of cloud, and vanish away in the ether!

Roll thyself up like a fist, to threaten and daunt me; I heed not 100

Either your warning or menace, or any omen of evil!

There is no land so sacred, no air so pure and so wholesome,

As is the air she breathes, and the soil that is pressed by her footsteps.

Here for her sake will I stay, and like an invisible presence

Hover about her forever, protecting, supporting her weakness; 105

Yes! as my foot was the first that stepped on this rock at the landing,
So, with the blessing of God, shall it be the last at the leaving!"

Meanwhile the Master alert, but with dignified air and important,
Scanning with watchful eye the tide and the wind and the weather,
Walked about on the sands; and the people crowded around him 110
Saying a few last words, and enforcing his careful remembrance.
Then, taking each by the hand, as if he were grasping a tiller,
Into the boat he sprang, and in haste shoved off to his vessel,
Glad in his heart to get rid of all this worry and flurry,
Glad to be gone from a land of sand and sickness and sorrow, 115
Short allowance of victual, and plenty of nothing but Gospel!
Lost in the sound of the oars was the last farewell of the Pilgrims.

O strong hearts and true! not one went back in the May Flower!

No, not one looked back, who had set his hand to this ploughing!

Soon were heard on board the shouts and songs of the sailors

120

Heaving the windlass round, and hoisting the ponderous anchor.

Then the yards were braced, and all sails set to the west-wind,

Blowing steady and strong; and the May Flower sailed from the harbor,

Rounded the point of the Gurnet, and leaving far to the southward

Island and cape of sand, and the Field of the First Encounter,

125

Took the wind on her quarter, and stood for the open Atlantic,

Borne on the send of the sea, and the swelling hearts of the Pilgrims.

Long in silence they watched the receding sail of the vessel,

Much endeared to them all, as something living and human;

124. Gurnet. A neck of land just opposite Plymouth Harbor.

Then, as if filled with the spirit, and wrapped in a vision prophetic, 130

Baring his hoary head, the excellent Elder of Plymouth

Said, "Let us pray!" and they prayed, and thanked the Lord and took courage.

Mournfully sobbed the waves at the base of the rock, and above them

Bowed and whispered the wheat on the hill of death, and their kindred

Seemed to awake in their graves, and to join in the prayer that they uttered. 135

Sun-illuminated and white, on the eastern verge of the ocean

Gleamed the departing sail, like a marble slab
in a graveyard;

Buried beneath it lay forever all hope of escaping.

Lo! as they turned to depart, they saw the form of an Indian,

Watching them from the hill, but while they spoke with each other, 140

Pointing with outstretched hands, and saying,
"Look!" he had vanished.

So they returned to their homes; but Alden lingered a little,

Musing alone on the shore, and watching the wash of the billows Round the base of the rock, and the sparkle
and flash of the sunshine, Like the spirit of God, moving visibly over the waters. 145

65. Spirit of God. Compare Gen., I., 2.

“And the earth was without form, and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep. And the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters.”

PRISCILLA.

Thus for a while he stood, and mused by the shore of the ocean,
Thinking of many things, and most of all of Priscilla;
And as if thought had the power to draw to itself, like the loadstone, Whatsoever it touches, by subtile laws of its nature,
Lo! as he turned to depart, Priscilla was standing beside him. 5

“Are you so much offended, you will not speak to me?” said she.

“Am I so much to blame, that yesterday, when you were pleading Warmly the cause of another, my heart, impulsive and wayward, Pleaded your own, and spake out, forgetful
perhaps of decorum?”

3. Loadstone. A kind of stone which possesses the power of attracting iron.

Certainly you can forgive me for speaking so frankly, for saying 10

What I ought not to have said, yet now I can never unsay it;

For there are moments in life, when the heart is so full of emotion,

That if by chance it be shaken, or into its depth like a pebble

Drops some careless word, it overflows, and its secret,

Spilt on the ground like water, can never be gathered together. 15

Yesterday I was shocked, when I heard you speak of Miles Standish,

Praising his virtues, transforming his very defects into virtues,

Praising his courage and strength, and even his fighting in Flanders,

As if by fighting alone you could win the heart
of a woman,

Quite overlooking yourself and the rest, in exalting your hero.

Therefore I spake as I did, by an irresistible impulse. 20

You will forgive me, I hope, for the sake of the friendship between us,

Which is too true and too sacred to be so easily broken!"

Thereupon answered John Alden, the scholar,
the friend of Miles Standish

"I was not angry with you, with myself alone I was angry, 25

Seeing how badly I managed the matter I had in my keeping."

"No!" interrupted the maiden, with answer prompt and decisive;

"No; you were angry with me, for speaking so frankly and freely.

It was wrong, I acknowledge; for it is the fate
of a woman

Long to be patient and silent, to wait like a ghost that is speechless, 30

Till some questioning voice dissolves the spell of its silence.

Hence is the inner life of so many suffering women

Sunless and silent and deep, like subterranean rivers

Running through caverns of darkness, unheard,
unseen, and unfruitful,

Chafing their channels of stone, with endless and profitless murmurs." 35

Thereupon answered John Alden, the young man, the lover of women:

“Heaven forbid it, Priscilla; and truly they seem to me always

More like the beautiful rivers that watered the garden of Eden,

More like the river Euphrates, through deserts of Havilah flowing,

Filling the land with delight, and memories sweet of the garden!” 40

“Ah, by these words, I can see,” again interrupted the maiden,

“How very little you prize me, or care for what I am saying.

When from the depths of my heart, in pain and with secret misgiving,

Frankly I speak to you, asking for sympathy only and kindness,

Straightway you take up my words, that are plain and direct and in earnest, 45

39. Euphrates. One of the four rivers mentioned in Genesis which flowed out of the Garden of Eden.

39. Havilah. A land mentioned in Genesis surrounded by the river Pison:

“The name of the first is Pison: that is it which compasseth the whole land of Havilah, where there is gold.”

Turn them away from their meaning, and answer with flattering phrases.

This is not right, is not just, is not true to the best that is in you;

For I know and esteem you, and feel that your nature is noble,

Lifting mine up to a higher, a more ethereal level.

Therefore I value your friendship, and feel it perhaps the more keenly 50

If you say aught that implies I am only as one among many,

If you make use of those common and complimentary phrases

Most men think so fine, in dealing and speaking with women,

But which women reject as insipid, if not as insulting."

Mute and amazed was Alden; and listened and looked at Priscilla, 55

Thinking he never had seen her more fair, more divine in her beauty.

He who but yesterday pleaded so glibly the cause of another,

Stood there embarrassed and silent, and seeking in vain for an answer.

So the maiden went on, and little divined or imagined

What was at work in his heart, that made him so awkward and speechless. 60

“Let us, then, be what we are, and speak what we think, and in all things

Keep ourselves loyal to truth, and the sacred professions of friendship.

It is no secret I tell you, nor am I ashamed to declare it:

I have liked to be with you, to see you, to speak with you always.

So I was hurt at your words, and a little affronted to hear you 65

Urge me to marry your friend, though he were the Captain Miles Standish.

For I must tell you the truth: much more to me is your friendship

Than all the love he could give, were he twice the hero you think him.”

Then she extended her hand, and Alden, who eagerly grasped it,

Felt all the wounds in his heart, that were aching and bleeding so sorely, 70

Healed by the touch of that hand, and he said,
with a voice full of feeling:

“Yes, we must ever be friends; and of all who offer you friendship
Let me be ever the first, the truest, the nearest and dearest!”

Casting a farewell look at the glimmering
sail of the May Flower, Distant, but still in sight, and sinking below
the horizon, 75
Homeward together they walked, with a strange,
indefinite feeling,
That all the rest had departed and left them alone in the desert.
But, as they went through the fields in the blessing and smile of the sunshine, Lighter grew their hearts, and Priscilla said very archly:
“Now that our terrible Captain has gone in pursuit of the Indians, 80
Where he is happier far than he would be commanding a household,
You may speak boldly, and tell me of all that happened between you,
When you returned last night, and said how ungrateful you found me.”

Thereupon answered John Alden, and told her the whole of the story —

Told her his own despair, and the direful wrath of Miles Standish. 85

Whereat the maiden smiled, and said between laughing and earnest,

“He is a little chimney, and heated hot in a moment!”

But as he gently rebuked her, and told her how much he had suffered —

How he had even determined to sail that day
in the May Flower,

And had remained for her sake, on hearing the dangers that threatened — 90

All her manner was changed, and she said with a faltering accent,

“Truly I thank you for this: how good you have been to me always!”

Thus, as a pilgrim devout, who toward Jerusalem journeys,

Taking three steps in advance, and one reluctantly backward,

Urged by importunate zeal, and withheld by pangs of contrition; 95

Slowly but steadily onward, receding yet ever advancing,
Journeyed this Puritan youth to the Holy Land of his longings, Urged by the fervor of love, and withheld by remorseful misgivings.

A PILGRIM SOLDIER

THE MARCH OF MILES STANDISH.

Meanwhile the stalwart Miles Standish was marching steadily northward, Winding through forest and swamp, and along the trend of the sea-shore,
All day long, with hardly a halt, the fire of his anger
Burning and crackling within, and the sulphurous odor of powder Seeming more sweet to his nostrils than all the scents of the forest. 5 Silent and moody he went, and much he revolved his discomfort;
He who was used to success, and to easy victories always,
Thus to be flouted, rejected, and laughed to scorn by a maiden,
Thus to be mocked and betrayed by the friend whom most he had trusted!
Ah! 'twas too much to be borne, and he fretted and chafed in his armor!

“I alone am to blame,” he muttered, “for mine was the folly.

What has a rough old soldier, grown grim and gray in the harness,

Used to the camp and its ways, to do with the wooing of maidens?

’Twas but a dream — let it pass — let it vanish like so many others!

What I thought was a flower, is only a weed, and is worthless; 15

Out of my heart will I pluck it, and throw it away, and henceforward

Be but a fighter of battles, a lover and wooer of dangers!”

Thus he revolved in his mind his sorry defeat and discomfort,

While he was marching by day or lying at night in the forest,

Looking up at the trees, and the constellations beyond them. 20

After a three days’ march he came to an Indian encampment

Pitched on the edge of a meadow, between the sea and the forest;

Women at work by the tents, and the warriors horrid with war-paint,

Seated about a fire, and smoking and talking
together;
Who, when they saw from afar the sudden approach of the white men, 25 Saw the flash of the sun on breastplate and sabre and musket, Straightway leaped to their feet, and two, from among them advancing,
Came to parley with Standish, and offer him
furs as a present;
Friendship was in their looks, but in their hearts
there was hatred.
Braves of the tribes were these, and brothers gigantic in stature, 30
Huge as Goliath of Gath, or the terrible Og, king of Bashan;
One was Pecksuot named, and the other was called Wattawamat.
Round their necks were suspended their knives
in scabbards of wampum,

31. Goliath of Gath. A gigantic Philistine mentioned in I. Sam., 17. His height was between nine and eleven feet.

31. Og. An Amorite so large that his bed was fourteen feet long. He was slain by the Israelites under Moses.

33. Wampum. Small shell beads used by the Indians for money and ornaments.

Two-edged, trenchant knives, with points as sharp as a needle.

Other arms had they none, for they were cunning and crafty. 35

“Welcome, English!” they said — these words they had learned from the traders

Touching at times on the coast, to barter and chaffer for peltries.

Then in their native tongue they began to parley with Standish,

Through his guide and interpreter, Hobomok,
friend of the white man,

Begging for blankets and knives, but mostly for muskets and powder, 40

Kept by the white man, they said, concealed,
with the plague, in his cellars,

Ready to be let loose, and destroy his brother the red man!

But when Standish refused, and said he would give them the Bible,

Suddenly changing their tone, they began to boast and to bluster.

Then Watawamat advanced with a stride in front of the other, 45

And, with a lofty demeanor, thus vauntingly spoke to the Captain:

“Now Wattawamat can see, by the fiery eyes
of the Captain,
Angry is he in his heart; but the heart of the brave Wattawamat
Is not afraid at the sight. He was not born of a woman,
But on a mountain, at night, from an oak-tree riven by lightning. 50
Forth he sprang at a bound, with all his weapons about him,
Shouting, ‘Who is there here to fight with the brave Wattawamat?’ ”
Then he unsheathed his knife, and, whetting
the blade on his left hand, Held it aloft and displayed a woman’s face on the handle,
Saying, with bitter expression and look of sinister meaning: 55
“I have another at home, with the face of a man on the handle;
By and by they shall marry; and there will be plenty of children!”

Then stood Pecksuot forth, self-vaunting, insulting Miles Standish:
While with his fingers he patted the knife that hung at his bosom,

Drawing it half from its sheath, and plunging it back, as he muttered, 60

“By and by it shall see; it shall eat; ah, ha!
but shall speak not!

This is the mighty Captain the white men have sent to destroy us!

He is a little man: let him go and work with the women!”

Meanwhile Standish had noted the faces and figures of Indians

Peeping and creeping about from bush to tree in the forest, 65

Feigning to look for game, with arrows set on their bow-strings,

Drawing about him still closer and closer the net of their ambush.

But undaunted he stood, and dissembled and treated them smoothly;

So the old chronicles say, that were writ in the days of the fathers.

But when he heard their defiance, the boast, the taunt, and the insult, 70

All the hot blood of his race, of Sir Hugh and of Thurston de Standish,

Boiled and beat in his heart, and swelled in the veins of his temples.

Headlong he leaped on the boaster, and, snatching his knife from its scabbard, Plunged it into his heart, and, reeling backward,
the savage
Fell with his face to the sky, and a fiendlike fierceness upon it. 75
Straight there arose from the forest the awful sound of the war-whoop,
And, like a flurry of snow on the whistling wind of December, Swift and sudden and keen came a flight of feathery arrows.
Then came a cloud of smoke, and out of the cloud came the lightning,
Out of the lightning thunder; and death unseen ran before it. 80
Frightened the savages fled for shelter in swamp
and in thicket,
Hotly pursued and beset; but their sachem,
the brave Wattawamat, Fled not; he was dead. Unswerving and swift had a bullet
Passed through his brain, and he fell with both hands clutching the greensward, Seeming in death to hold back from his foe the land of his fathers. 85

There on the flowers of the meadow the warriors lay, and above them, Silent, with folded arms, stood Hobomok, friend of the white man.

Smiling at length he exclaimed to the stalwart Captain of Plymouth:

“Pecksuot bragged very loud, of his courage,
his strength, and his stature —

Mocked the great Captain, and called him a little man; but I see now

90

Big enough have you been to lay him speechless before you!”

Thus the first battle was fought and won by the stalwart Miles Standish.

When the tidings thereof were brought to the village of Plymouth,

And as a trophy of war the head of the brave Wattawamat

Scowled from the roof of the fort, which at once was a church and a fortress,

All who beheld it rejoiced, and praised the Lord, and took courage.

Only Priscilla averted her face from this spectre of terror,

Thanking God in her heart that she had not married Miles Standish; Shrinking, fearing almost, lest, coming home
from his battles,
He should lay claim to her hand, as the prize and reward of his valór.

VIII.

THE SPINNING-WHEEL.

Month after month passed away, and in Autumn
the ships of the merchants Came with kindred and friends, with cattle and corn for the Pilgrims.

All in the village was peace; the men were intent on their labors,

Busy with hewing and building, with garden-plot and with merestead,

Busy with breaking the glebe, and mowing the grass in the meadows, 5

Searching the sea for its fish, and hunting the deer in the forest.

All the village was peace; but at times the rumor
of warfare

Filled the air with alarm, and the apprehension of danger.

4. Merestead. The land within a certain mere or boundary.

5. Glebe. Originally a clod of earth; more particularly, the cultivated land belonging to a parish church.

Bravely the stalwart Miles Standish was scouring
the land with his forces, Waxing valiant in fight and defeating the alien armies, 10
Till his name had become a sound of fear to the nations.

Anger was still in his heart, but at times the remorse and contrition
Which in all noble natures succeed the passionate outbreak,
Came like a rising tide, that encounters the rush of a river,
Staying its current awhile, but making it bitter and brackish. 15

Meanwhile Alden at home had built him a new habitation,
Solid, substantial, of timber rough-hewn from the firs of the forest.
Wood-barred was the door, and the roof was covered with rushes; Latticed the windows were, and the window-panes were of paper, Oiled to admit the light, while wind and rain were excluded. 20

There too he dug a well, and around it planted an orchard:

Still may be seen to this day some trace of the well and the orchard.

Close to the house was the stall, where, safe and secure from annoyance,

Raghorn, the snow-white steer, that had fallen to Alden's allotment

In the division of cattle, might ruminatè in the night-time

25

Over the pastures he cropped, made fragrant by sweet pennyroyal.

Oft when his labor was finished, with eager feet would the dreamer

Follow the pathway that ran through the woods to the house of Priscilla,

Led by illusions romantic and subtile deceptions of fancy,

Pleasure disguised as duty, and love in the semblance of friendship.

Ever of her he thought, when he fashioned the walls of his dwelling;

Ever of her he thought when he delved in the soil of his garden;

Ever of her he thought, when he read in his Bible on Sunday

Praise of the virtuous woman, as she is described in the Proverbs —

How the heart of her husband doth safely trust in her always, 35

How all the days of her life she will do him
good, and not evil,

How she seeketh the wool and the flax and worketh with gladness,

How she layeth her hand to the spindle and holdeth the distaff,

How she is not afraid of the snow for herself or her household,

Knowing her household are clothed with the scarlet cloth of her weaving! 40

34. Proverbs, xxxi.

10. "Who can find a virtuous woman? for her price is far above rubies.

11. The heart of her husband doth safely trust in her, so that he shall have no need of spoil.

12. She will do him good and not evil all the days of her life.

13. She seeketh wool, and flax, and worketh willingly with her hands.

19. She layeth her hands to the spindle, and her hands hold the distaff.

21. She is not afraid of the snow for her household; for all her household are clothed with scarlet."

So as she sat at her wheel one afternoon in the Autumn,
 Alden, who opposite sat, and was watching her dexterous fingers,
 As if the thread she was spinning were that of his life and his fortune, After a pause in their talk, thus spake to the sound of the spindle.
 "Truly, Priscilla," he said, "when I see you spinning and spinning, 45
 Never idle a moment, but thrifty and thoughtful of others,
 Suddenly you are transformed, are visibly changed in a moment;
 You are no longer Priscilla, but Bertha the Beautiful Spinner."
 Here the light foot on the treadle grew swifter and swifter; the spindle Uttered an angry snarl, and the thread snapped short in her fingers; 50 While the impetuous speaker, not heeding the mischief, continued:

48. Bertha. The wife of Pepin the Little and mother of Charles the Great of France. She died in 783 and was long celebrated in legend and story.

"You are the beautiful Bertha, the spinner, the queen of Helvetia;
 She whose story I read at a stall in the streets of Southampton,
 Who, as she rode on her palfrey, o'er valley and meadow and mountain, Ever was spinning her thread from a distaff
 fixed to her saddle. 55
 She was so thrifty and good, that her name passed into a proverb.
 So shall it be with your own, when the spinning-wheel shall no longer Hum in the house of the farmer, and fill its chambers with music.
 Then shall the mothers, reproving, relate how it was in their childhood, Praising the good old times, and the days of Priscilla the spinner!" 60
 Straight uprose from her wheel the beautiful
 Puritan maiden,
 Pleased with the praise of her thrift from him whose praise was the sweetest, Drew from the reel on the table a snowy skein of her spinning,

52. Helvetia. A part of Gaul nearly corresponding to Switzerland.

53. Southampton. An English seaport.

Thus making answer meanwhile, to the flattering phrases of Alden:

“Come, you must not be idle; if I am a pattern for housewives, 65

Show yourself equally worthy of being the model of husbands.

Hold this skein in your hands, while I wind it,
ready for knitting;

Then who knows but hereafter, when fashions
have changed and the manners,

Fathers may talk to their sons of the good old times of John Alden!”

Thus, with a jest and a laugh, the skein on his hands she adjusted, 70

He sitting awkwardly there, with his arms extended before him,

She standing graceful, erect, and winding the thread from his fingers,

Sometimes chiding a little his clumsy manner of holding,

Sometimes touching his hands, as she disentangled expertly

Twist or knot in the yarn, unawares — for how could she help it? 75

Sending electrical thrills through every nerve in his body.

Lo! in the midst of this scene, a breathless messenger entered,
Bringing in hurry and heat the terrible news from the village.

Yes; Miles Standish was dead! — an Indian had brought them the tidings —

Slain by a poisoned arrow, shot down in the front of the battle, 80

Into an ambush beguiled, cut off with the whole of his forces;

All the town would be burned, and all the people be murdered!

Such were the tidings of evil that burst on the hearts of the hearers.

Silent and statue-like stood Priscilla, her face looking backward

Still at the face of the speaker, her arms uplifted in horror; 85

But John Alden, upstarting, as if the barb of the arrow

Piercing the heart of his friend had struck his own, and had sundered

Once and forever the bonds that held him bound as a captive,

Wild with excess of sensation, the awful delight
of his freedom,

Mingled with pain and regret, unconscious of what he was doing, 90
 Clasped, almost with a groan, the motionless
 form of Priscilla,
 Pressing her close to his heart, as forever his own, and exclaiming:
 "Those whom the Lord hath united, let no man put them asunder!"

Even as rivulets twain, from distant and separate sources,
 Seeing each other afar, as they leap from the rocks, and pursuing 95
 Each one its devious path, but drawing nearer
 and nearer,
 Rush together at last, at their trysting-place in the forest;
 So these lives that had run thus far in separate channels,
 Coming in sight of each other, then swerving
 and flowing asunder, Parted by barriers strong, but drawing nearer
 and nearer, 100
 Rushed together at last, and one was lost in the other.

93. "Those whom," etc. From the Order of Marriage in the Book of Common Prayer.

MONUMENT,

IX.

THE WEDDING DAY.

Forth from the curtain of clouds, from the tent of purple and scarlet, Issued the sun, the great High-Priest, in his garments resplendent, Holiness unto the Lord, in letters of light, on his forehead,
Round the hem of his robe the golden bells and pomegranates.
Blessing the world he came, and the bars of vapor beneath him 5 Gleamed like a grate of brass, and the sea at his feet was a laver!

This was the wedding morn of Priscilla the Puritan maiden.

4. Golden bells. Exodus, xxviii.

“And beneath upon the hem of it thou shalt make pomegranates of blue, and of purple, and of scarlet, round about the hem thereof; and bells of gold between them round about.”

6. Laver. A large circular vessel, cast from the polished brass mirrors contributed by the Hebrew women, and placed between the door of the tabernacle and the altar, with water for the sacred ablutions.

Friends were assembled together; the Elder and Magistrate also

Graced the scene with their presence, and stood like the Law and the Gospel,

One with the sanction of earth and one with the blessing of heaven. 10

Simple and brief was the wedding, as that of Ruth and of Boaz.

Softly the youth and the maiden repeated the words of betrothal,

Taking each other for husband and wife in the Magistrate's presence,

After the Puritan way, and the laudable custom of Holland.

Fervently then, and devoutly, the excellent Elder
of Plymouth 15

Prayed for the hearth and the home, that were founded that day in affection,

Speaking of life and of death, and imploring divine benedictions.

Lo! when the service was ended, a form appeared on the threshold,

11. Ruth. The daughter-in-law of Naomi, who fled with her from the famine into Moab.

11. Boaz. A kinsman of Naomi in Moab, who married Ruth. See Ruth, IV., 11.

Clad in armor of steel, a sombre and sorrowful figure!

Why does the bridegroom start and stare at the strange apparition? 20

Why does the bride turn pale, and hide her face on his shoulder?

Is it a phantom of air — a bodiless, spectral
illusion?

Is it a ghost from the grave, that has come to forbid the betrothal?

Long had it stood there unseen, a guest uninvited, unwelcomed;

Over its clouded eyes there had passed at times
an expression 25

Softening the gloom and revealing the warm heart hidden beneath them,

As when across the sky the driving rack of the rain-cloud

Grows for a moment thin, and betrays the sun
by its brightness.

Once it had lifted its hand, and moved its lips,
but was silent,

As if an iron will had mastered the fleeting intention. 30

But when were ended the troth and the prayer
and the last benediction,

Into the room it strode, and the people beheld with amazement

Bodily there in his armor Miles Standish, the Captain of Plymouth!

Grasping the bridegroom's hand, he said with emotion, "Forgive me!

I have been angry and hurt — too long have I cherished the feeling; 35

I have been cruel and hard, but now, thank God! it is ended.

Mine is the same hot blood that leaped in the veins of Hugh Standish,

Sensitive, swift to resent, but as swift in atoning for error.

Never so much ~~as now~~ was Miles Standish the friend of John Alden."

Thereupon answered the bridegroom: "Let all be forgotten between us — 40

All save the dear, old friendship, and that shall grow older and dearer!"

Then the Captain advanced, and, bowing, saluted Priscilla,

Gravely, and after the manner of old-fashioned gentry in England,

Something of camp and of court, of town and
of country, commingled,

Wishing her joy of her wedding, and loudly lauding her husband.

Then he said with a smile: "I should have remembered the adage —

If you would be well served, you must serve yourself; and moreover,

No man can gather cherries in Kent at the season of Christmas!"

Great was the people's amazement, and greater yet their rejoicing,

Thus to behold once more the sun-burnt face of their Captain, 50

Whom they had mourned as dead; and they gathered and crowded about him,

Eager to see him and hear him, forgetful of bride and bridegroom,

Questioning, answering, laughing, and each interrupting the other,

Till the good Captain declared, being quite overpowered and bewildered,

He had rather by far break into an Indian encampment, 55

Than come again to a wedding to which he had not been invited.

48. Kent. A country in the extreme southeast of England.

Meanwhile the bridegroom went forth and stood with the bride at the doorway, Breathing the perfumed air of that warm and beautiful morning.

Touched with autumnal tints, but lonely and sad in the sunshine,

Lay extended before them the land of toil and privation; 60

There were the graves of the dead, and the barren waste of the sea-shore,

There the familiar fields, the groves of pine,
 and the meadows;

But to their eyes transfigured, it seemed as the Garden of Eden,

Filled with the presence of God, whose voice was the sound of the ocean.

Soon was their vision disturbed by the noise and stir of departure, 65

Friends coming forth from the house, and impatient of longer delaying,

Each with his plan for the day, and the work that was left uncompleted.

Then from a stall near at hand, amid exclamations of wonder,

Alden the thoughtful, the careful, so happy, so proud of Priscilla,

Brought out his snow-white steer, obeying the hand of its master, 70

Led by a cord that was tied to an iron ring in its nostrils,

Covered with crimson cloth, and a cushion placed for a saddle.

She should not walk, he said, through the dust
and heat of the noonday;

Nay, she should ride like a queen, not plod along like a peasant.

Somewhat alarmed at first, but reassured by the others, 75

Placing her hand on the cushion, her foot in the hand of her husband,

Gayly, with joyous laugh, Priscilla mounted her palfrey.

“Nothing is wanting now,” he said with a smile,
“but the distaff;

Then you would be in truth my queen, my beautiful Bertha!”

Onward the bridal procession now moved to their new habitation, 80

Happy husband and wife, and friends conversing
together.

Pleasantly murmured the brook, as they crossed the ford in the forest,

Pleased with the image that passed, like a dream of love through its bosom, Tremulous, floating in air, o'er the depth of the azure abysses.
Down through the golden leaves the sun was pouring his splendors, Gleaming on purple grapes, that, from branches
above them suspended, Mingled their odorous breath with the balm of the pine and the fir-tree, Wild and sweet as the clusters that grew in the valley of Eshcol.
Like a picture it seemed of the primitive, pastoral ages,
Fresh with the youth of the world, and recalling Rebecca and Isaac,

88. Eshcol. A small, fertile valley near Hebron, which abounds in grapes, figs and pomegranates. See Num., XIII., 22-27.

“And they came unto the brook of Eshcol, and cut down from thence a branch with one cluster of grapes, and they bare it between two upon a staff: and they brought of the pomegranates, and of the figs.”

90. Rebecca and Isaac. See Gen., XXI., 24-28 and XXIV., 63, 64.

“And Isaac went out to meditate in the field at the eventide: and he lifted up his eyes, and saw, and behold, the camels were coming.

Old and yet ever new, and simple and beautiful always,
Love immortal and young in the endless succession of lovers.
So through the Plymouth woods passed onward
the bridal procession.
